COVID-19 Update

Subj: Clinical Rotations Update

One of the central education pillars at Rush University is our clinical training. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the University had to make the difficult decision in March to postpone onsite clinical education and remove all students from clinical rotations. We understand that many of you are concerned about when the university will resume onsite and bedside clinical training and when you will be able to return to your rotations. We want to assure you that every program is working on a re-entry plan pending lifting of restrictions by the state and city, and the availability of patients and clinical preceptors. We are all operating under several uncertain conditions, which makes it more difficult to solidify our plans; however, we will share with you your program's plan once these uncertainties are clarified. If you have a specific question about your clinical training, please do not hesitate to contact your program director.
